I started in 2017 april I think I met the thread in part 3,towards the end(I made sure I read part 2 and over 300 pages for part 3) was present in the opening ceremony of part 4.

My admission testimony was in part 4,

May AM,visa testimony in Part 5,

I started this dream with 50kobo at hand. I had to share DHL space with my friend cos money no dey to send am.

But favour remembered me just 7 days before my interview ,my confirmation from fintiba came the night before my interview.

Ppl said it was a slim chance for me getting the visa cos I am going for another Bsc after so long , but I went ahead and took the chane. Today it's a different story.

What am I saying here have faith, believe and keep firm to your dreams. If it can happen to me it will happen for you.

I have wanted to leave Nigeria for schooling abroad since I wrote my waec in 2000 but no green light until 18 years later.

Never say never.

For those waiting for testimony, your own will surely come. Mine is already here.

I started my research in part 5, applied for admission in part 5, funded my BA and got my AM all in part 5 of this thread. In a few days from now, I will be leaving for Germany.

The journey has not been easy. I remember when I was racking my head looking for schools that would offer me admission because my CGPA is really low(2.46 Nigerian scale, 2.9 German scale). I asked lots of questions and did lots of research. Someone even asked me to pay #250k to get me admission instead of telling me the schools to apply to. Thank God for guys like ObinnaAlex and others who selflessly directed me.

When I hear people who got 3.5+ CGPA come on here to ask questions like whether you can get admission, I just laugh. If I had that GPA eh...chii...Do your due diligence, do your research.

Most people never believed I would get admission for MSc program in Germany. Even I did not believe it, but like play like play, I got 2 admission offers. One in Anhalt University and one in Berlin.

If you are applying for winter admission session, it's very important that you do your research. Many people don't read. Nobody will hold your hand if you are not willing to put in the effort; everybody is busy with their own life and process. I said I started my journey in part 5 of this thread but I started reading everything from part 3. Yes, I read part 3, part 4 and was finally up to date in part 5.

It does not make much sense to repeat mistakes that other people have made and documented all because you can't be bothered to read. Yes, it's important to ask questions, but read first. There is time. Read and read and read.

Get all your documents ready from day 1. Many people don't worry about letter of English proficiency until it's getting late. If you can afford IELTS, write it. If you can't, go to your school and get the letter before you start your application. Make sure your passport is ready, etc.

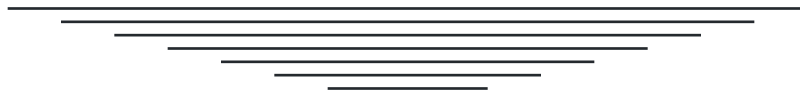

That is the much I can say for now. I hope I get to contribute more often in this thread so I can help others too; I was not very active in part 5. I admire the amazing job that people like Eldee, heybaby12, dailydollar, etc are doing here to raise others.

For those of you in DE, I hope to see you soon.

Let us all succeed.

Please if you have any questions for me, ask them here. I don't always get to my PM on time..

Good morning all, I have been following and reading your questions and comments hoping I will learn and teach my friends that are on this same journey.

last month, I found out I was pregnant (family planning failed) its funny I am suppose to be happy but the thought of putting my plans on hold made me sad. Please

I want advice, if I have a chance of travelling with my baby or if I can even get a visa while pregnant. Don't know if I should just stop the whole application process or continue. I don't even know d way forward, right now I just put every tin on hold./blockquote>

If you have started applying to schools, please continue. Being Pregnant will not stop you from getting visa (especially if it isn't too obvious during interview). I have friends who came in here while pregnant, have given birth here and are still schooling.

Let me not deceive you, it will be tough at first but once you get into the routine, you will be very fine.

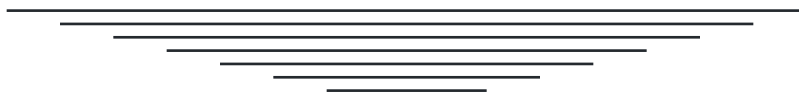

1. Your insurance covers you and your baby (antenatal and treatments all free)
2. Your delivery will be free of charge (insurance covers that too)
3. After delivery, you are expected to take a year off to take care of your child
4. Your school should help you with kindergarten for your child when the time comes for that.
5. You just might apply and get some benefits from the state you live.

So, it is definitely doable and being a lady, you should be able to mix and make friends easily.

Your hubby's support is of course paramount because you will need all the help you can get but, it definitely is doable as people are already doing that.

All the best..

Many thanks to God almighty who have given us the breath to live for tomorrow, the grace to handle difficult situations, the wisdom to relate with our fellow men and the resources to achieve and fulfil our dreams. I have already marked this year as my year of testimonies and I pray testimonies will abound in leaps for everyone of us here in the mighty name of Jesus Christ.

I also want to thank the moderators who painstakingly keep watch over fraudulent activities here, honestly it's not an easy task, if you think otherwise, come give it a try. This I understood with the case of impersonation of honourableseyi. Even though a lot of people have been warned to always scrutinize every financial dealings with people here, but unfortunately some choose to pay deaf ears probably due to desperation or ignorance or some other things I can't really classify.

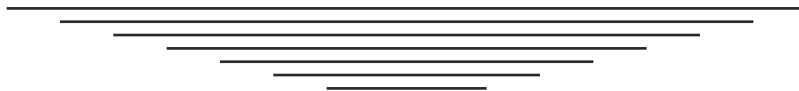

I also want to thank folks who have brought out their time and resources to assist people in one way or the other. Kudos to you all. God bless you richly in all measures.

I will also thank our able veterans who despite their busy schedules, still find time to inform us here on happenings. Please I really plead for more contributions more especially from those who just travelled not to long, give us situation reports in your different locations so as to encourage others still aspiring. Also want to request for the older veterans to give us tips on careers, life after schooling.

I will also like to thank every other contributors here, your presence in every way have contributed to the life and the amazing success we see from this thread.

May God bless us all..

I wish everybody success including myself in this part 6.

But please let us encourage people to read, Heybaby12 always say that too,but we don't like to hear such thing. Because this travel need attention and time. To avoid a lot of mistake like: ADMISSION (e.g sending incomplete document or sending original document to the school instead of photocopy), INTERVIEW (e.g someone went for interview with a certify copy), AM(e.g i have seen a situation where someone got traveling insurance that embassy reject, that traveling date is not complete or so. He posted that last week. And he paid extra 8,000). Last two weeks ago someone went and verify his original document.. imagine.

Please let us read. So many guys outside they are tired of some of the question we ask here. Imagine someone ask yesterday " how much is transport from Enugu to Lagos "

Please let us tell ourselves the truth. If your the one that is over they, 1) you came back from exam or lecture, 2) you still enter street to hustle(work). Then you now came to Nairaland to help one or two people out. Then what you will see is " please how much is transport from Enugu to Lagos ". How are you going to feel?

Chriswaso,Edee,Deustchemann etc they have help a lot of people here with experience they gathered here. Just because they read.

I started reading this part 5 around August ending, I didn't ask any single question and I got 6 admission.

I pray that Admission, AM and Visa will fall to everyone.

Here is the part 6

An incredible job by all contributors including those who ask questions and those who provide answers, job well done!

This is part 5 <https://www.nairaland.com/4566903/general-german-student-visa-enquiries>

blockquote>

`span style="color:#990000;">The following steps will help newbies/span>` (Thanks to CassieV for the tips)

Most of the schools in Germany are tuition free even for international students, you only get to pay a certain amount as semester fees say between 100-400 euros and most times the semester fee comes with a semester ticket to aid in transportation in your city or town.

However, before you're granted a student visa, you have to prove that you can take care of your living expenses with one of the following means ;

1. Block account: The estimated living expenses for a student in a month is 720euros, when you multiply that by 12 months, you get 8640euros. This is the amount you're required to block in an already opened account with either Deutsch bank, Fintiba or Xpatrio. It is called a block account because you will not be able to withdraw everything at once, only 720euros will be released to you every month.

2. Sponsorship letter: If you have a relative living and working legally in Germany, they can get you this letter. They'll have to visit the alien office in their city and will be required to provide some documents and pay a certain fee. The letter will be sent to you when they receive it so that you can go with it for your visa interview.

3. Scholarship: This is usually the best if you have the scholarship, your visa will be granted in under 2 weeks after interview. So try and look for scholarships you can apply to.

Now that you understand the financial situation, let's go into the application process.

To search for schools, click on this link

[https://www.daad.de/deutschland/studienangebote/international-programmes/en/?p=l&q=&fos=0&lang\[\]=2&fee\[\]=0&sortBy=1&page=1&display=list](https://www.daad.de/deutschland/studienangebote/international-programmes/en/?p=l&q=&fos=0&lang[]=2&fee[]=0&sortBy=1&page=1&display=list)
filter your search to make it easier, there are English taught courses there.

Generally, the very important documents needed to apply to schools in Germany are;

1. Transcript
2. English Proficiency
3. School Certificates (Degree, Waec, etc)

However, depending on the school, some other documents needed are as follows.

4. Curriculum Vitae
5. Motivation letter
6. Reference letters
7. GRE test

8. Etcetera.. Visit your prospective school website and find out the documents they need from you.

Note: You don't apply with your original documents, you have to make photocopies of them and Certify them in High court or a Notary public. If you stay in Lagos, you can certify at the German Embassy too. You'll have to book appointment for that.

For those planning to go for a Bachelors course, you need a 100level transcript from a university to apply for a BSc program in germany. WAEC alone will not be enough and No, OND will not do, you need a HND.

For the application proper, it is always important to go through the website of the schools you want to apply to, you'll get a lot of information form there concerning how to apply. Some schools do only online applications, some requires that you send your application documents to them by post after applying online, some you send your documents as pdf to their email address and then you get the uni assist crew.

Like I said earlier, it is important to go visit and read the websites.

When you get your admission letter, open a block account immediately(that is if you don't already have a sponsorship letter) and as soon as you get your account details, send an email to the embassy requesting for a visa interview date.

You need these to get an interview date:

1. Admission letter
2. Block account/sponsorship letter/scholarship letter
3. International passport data page(scanned)

Then your Full name and Resident address.

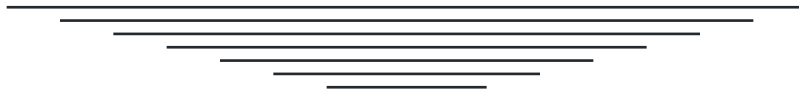

Prepare for your interview

Go for your interview /blockquote>

For newbies your German school search starts here

<https://www.daad.de/deutschland/studienangebote/en/>.

Good morning all, I have been following and reading your questions and comments hoping I will learn and teach my friends that are on this same journey.

last month, I found out I was pregnant (family planning failed) its funny I am suppose to be happy but the thought of putting my plans on hold made me sad. Please I want advice, if I have a chance of travelling with my baby or if I can even get a visa while pregnant. Don't know if I should just stop the whole application process or continue. I don't even know d way forward, right now I just put every tin on hold./blockquote>

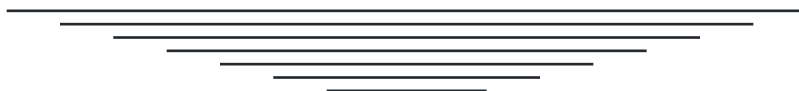

I'm sure there must be a way for you. There's definitely extra cost if you give birth before traveling because you must show that you have enough funds to cover your baby as well. Many schools have children facilities that nursing mothers will find helpful. The bigger question for me is whether you can handle the stress and pressure of studying while nursing your baby.

There's no easy answer to that. If you decide to go ahead, I'm sure no embassy will deny you a visa because you're having a baby.

But if you're pregnant up to 7 months, I doubt if any airlines will allow you to fly.

This is only my opinion. I wish you the best of luck. Give my regards to that sharpshooter. It's not easy lol.

@Gillespie1 I hope you have decided to turn a new leaf this year @justwise that's the handle that stole from me. /blockquote>

That ID was banned since 14th of Feb, do you have his email address apart from gillespiecollins11@Gmail.com?

His bank details and really name will help

This is a thread where you post details of all scammers in nairaland

Very encouraging, have been a silent reader since February, but started reading from 2017, 2018 in parts that are relevant till date to get knowledge for winter application 2019. We kind of have same vision, also wrote my waec year 2000, graduated 2008 from Uni, just that I wanted to do my masters abroad and your testimony has given me more courage to keep pushing on. God bless you, hope to see you in Germany soon in Jesus name.

I started in 2017 april I think I met the thread in part 3,towards the end(I made sure I read part 2 and over 300 pages for part 3) was present in the opening ceremony of part 4.

My admission testimony was in part 4,

May AM,visa testimony in Part 5,

I started this dream with 50kobo at hand. I had to share DHL space with my friend cos money no dey to send am.

But favour remembered me just 7 days before my interview ,my confirmation from fintiba came the night before my interview.

Ppl said it was a slim chance for me getting the visa cos I am going for another Bsc after so long , but I went ahead and took the chane. Today it's a different story.

What am I saying here have faith, believe and keep firm to your dreams. If it can happen to me it will happen for you.

I have wanted to leave Nigeria for schooling abroad since I wrote my waec in 2000 but no green light until 18 years later.

Never say never.
